Hybrid Hate is the first book to study the conflation of antisemitism and anti-Black racism. As objects of racism, Jews and Blacks have been linked together for centuries as peoples apart from the general run of humanity. In this book, Tudor Parfitt investigates the development of antisemitism, anti-Black racism, and race theory in the West from the Renaissance to the Second World War. Parfitt explains how Jews were often perceived as Black in medieval Europe, and the conflation of Jews and Blacks continued throughout the period of the Enlightenment. With the discovery of a community of Black Jews in Loango in West Africa in 1777, and later of Black Jews in India, the Middle East, and other parts of Africa, the notion of multiracial Jews was born. Over the following centuries, the figure of the hybrid Black Jew was drawn into the maelstrom of evolving theories about race hierarchies and taxonomies. Parfitt analyses how Jews and Blacks were increasingly conflated in a racist discourse from the mid-nineteenth century to the period of the Third Reich, as the two fundamental prejudices of the West were combined. Hybrid Hate offers a new interpretation of the rise of antisemitism and anti-Black racism in Europe, and casts light on contemporary racist discourses in the United States and Europe. The Races of the Old Testament by Archibald Henry Sayce, first published in 1891, is a rare manuscript, the original residing in one of the great libraries of the world. This book is a reproduction of that original, which has been scanned and cleaned by state-of-the-art publishing tools for better readability and enhanced appreciation. Restoration Editors' mission is to bring long out of print manuscripts back to life. Some smudges, annotations or unclear text may still exist, due to permanent damage to the original work. We believe the literary significance of the text justifies offering this reproduction, allowing a new generation to appreciate it. Peter Fine's innovative study traces the development of a mass visual culture in the United States, focusing on how new visual technologies played a part in embedding racialized ideas about African Americans, and how whiteness was privileged within modernist ideals of visual form. Fine considers the visual and material manifestations of this process through the history of three important technologies of the art of mechanical reproduction — typography, lithography, and photography, and then moves on to consider how racialized representation has been configured and contested within contemporary film and television, fine art and digital design. This new D&D sourcebook details various races that dwell in the wilderness, offering Dungeons & Dragons(players extensive information on the classic races of elves and halflings, new rules, information for interaction, new spells, and new magic items attuned to each race. This new D&D sourcebook details the major races of the Eberron world, with an in-depth look at the new races of the Eberron Campaign Setting, including changelings, the kalashtar, shifters, and the warforged. Phytophthora sojae is the causal agent of Phytophthora root rot of soybean (PRR), which could attack soybean at any growth stage and cause severe yield loss. Studies were conducted in 2001 and 2002 to determine whether new races had occurred and whether the frequencies of previously existing races had changed in Iowa by testing the purified isolates on eight differential cultivars. Four races that have not been reported previously in Iowa, races 20, 28, 35, and 41, were isolated. Eight isolates were found with seven virulence formula that had not been reported. The percentage of isolates that can overcome Rps 1k has increased from 5% in 1994 to 45% in this study. Dominance of race 3 in P. sojae population on soybean plants reported in previous surveys was replaced by that of races 25 and 35. Races 1 and 3 were still the most populous races in soil. The results suggested that the population composition of P. sojae has shifted, compared to a previous survey that was completed in 1994. Studies were conducted to compare fitness parameters of above P. sojae isolates to explain and predict the population shift of P. sojae. Zoospore production and colony growth rates at different temperatures were compared. Race infection aggressiveness was determined by virulence index value (VIV), calculated by formula $VIV=1+(ab \square 1)$, where a represents disease incidence (%), and b represents latent period (days/hours). With its medium ability of spore production and infection aggressiveness, race 1 might maintain or lose its popularity in the future. Races 25 and 35 were more aggressive overall and might become the dominant races in the Iowa soybean fields. Races 3 and 28 were of the weakest fitness parameters and might further decrease their proportion in the population. Significant differences among races were observed for colony diameter, zoospore production, and infection aggressiveness, and one or all of these components could be used to explain the shift and even predict the shift. Further study is needed to monitor the population shift, complete the knowledge of fitness characters of races of P. sojae, and to predict the population shift based on the information.
